... combines homespun storytelling mystery and sophisticated metaphysical aspects to create a multi-layered tension." The National Post

"...sparklingly original..." The Globe and Mail

Matthew is missing. Robert's seven-year-old brother has vanished on a walk into town. Robert's mother had asked him to accompany Matthew to Horshoe to buy some gum, but Robert was miles away engrossed in a Martian adventure story, and certainly not home on his farm in Depression-era Saskatchewan. And when his younger brother disappears, Robert figures it is his fault and he has to find him.

He soon notices there is something sinister happening. The hens are laying eggs with blood in them; a broken jar found out on the prairie has a plaintive echo of a young girl's voice; and most disturbingly, his parents are lost in a weird sort of daydream and have forgotten about their missing son.

It is up to Robert to discover where his brother has disappeared – along with the other boys and girls of Horshoe. He is led to an ivory-skinned stranger who suddenly appears and bewitches both parents and children with magical mirrors and a fantastic rainmaking machine.

In a style that has stomach muscles tightening right from the first sentence, Arthur Slade brings a new and sophisticated brand of psychological fear to the young-adult market. Dust is a story that will leave audiences breathless.
